gentlemen, if what I have said is true, are we not rapidly approaching a new epoch in cotton culture? Five years will suffice to spread universally over the cotton area of the South this wonderfully productive specie—and if it should prove lasting and not subject (as many new kinds have proven) to deterioration, it would not be unreasonable to estimate the American crop of 1880 at twenty millions of bales—which could be more easily raised and saved than a crop of three millions at the present time. What mighty changes will necessarily follow, I leave for solution to more fertile imaginations than my own. One thing is cer-
